FOREWORD

● The staff of the 1937 Mortonian presents the third of a series of four books depicting the wide range of educational opportunities found in Morton. The first of the series in 1935 dealt with the vocational field and that of domestic science. In 1936 the liberal arts courses in the departments of natural and social science, mathematics, art, English and language were featured.

The feature pages of this year's book have been devoted to a pictorial description of the training offered in the departments of music and commerce. On the cover the staff artist has introduced these features with his symbolic interpretaion of music blended wih the wheel of commerce.

DAISY M. BELL

The faculty of Morton has been honored for many years with the presence of two who are unexcelled in their respective fields of teaching. They have been a constant source of inspiration to the youth of today. Their patience and understanding have won for them the respect and admiration of all. To these, Louis M. Blaha and Daisy M. Bell, whose outstanding efforts in the fields of Music and Business Education have exemplified true character, high ideals, and loyal devotion, we respectfully dedicate the Nineteen-thirty-seven Mortonian.

MRS. LAURA CARNES

Died April, 1937

Many years ago there came to Morton a woman full of spirit and energy and humor and courage. She came to teach us to speak. Generations of Morton students will testify that she taught that and much more. Some of her love of the best in literature, some of her gallant spirit, some of her zest for life will continue so long as these pupils of hers play their part in the world.

With sadness and with deep affection the classes of 1905 to 1930 bid farewell to Mrs. Carnes.

Seniors

We cannot say, and we will not say
That they are dead. They are just away.
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
They have wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since they linger there
And you—oh, you, who the wildest yearn
For an old-time step, and the glad return,
Think of them faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here.
Think of them still as the same. We say,
They are not dead,—they are just away.

The Concert Band

Director, L. M. Blaha

The Morton Concert Band has brought many distinctive honors to the school in the field of music. Since 1931 the band has been rated in the first division by the outstanding judges of music in every contest in which it has participated. This community enjoyed the opportunity of welcoming home a National Championship Band in the years of 1931, 1933, and 1936.

A membership of one hundred and twenty players representing every section of the school district comprises the Morton Concert Band of 1936-1937. This exceeds all past records in the school's history. An even more remarkable record was achieved in the increased requirements for membership in the band. A preliminary training of three years or more is required and many of the seniors of the band have had eight or nine years of training.

When performing before the public, the uniforms and the instrumental equipment of the band represent an investment of $25,000. A very complete instrumentation is maintained, assuring tonal effects found only among the world's finest bands.

The facilities of the Music Department with its fine rehearsal room leave little to be desired in improvement. One of the most essential factors in the rapid and successful development of the band is its very fine library. Its files contain many selections of every musical form representing most of the great composers in musical history.

The training of the young musicians in the band is based upon the most scientific and up-to-date methods and ideas obtainable. It is carried out in two separate procedures, the purely technical and the artistic form. The results of this training are applied to a long list of varied activities found within the school and the community, including the participation in contests and the presentation of concerts.

The accomplishments of the Morton Concert Band are known to be the highest among high schools throughout the land.

The Morton Orchestra has progressed in great strides since its beginning in 1907. Although there are no accurate records of its activity at that time, we know that at first there was a very limited instrumentation—violins, cornets, piano, drums, and a few others.

By the early 1920's the orchestra had grown to include between forty and fifty players with all instruments represented. Morton's first experience in music contests was in 1925 when, under Mr. Nicholas's direction, our group entered a contest with Chicago and suburban schools, and was awarded second place.

Since 1933 the Morton Orchestra has entered three state contests. In May, 1933, Morton was host to the Illinois State Orchestra contest and placed second in it. In 1934 Morton took first place at the state contest held at the Joliet High School. A lack of funds prevented Morton fro mattending the national contest that year. In 1935 the orchestra won the state contest and placed second in the national contest held at Madison, Wisconsin.

Lately the membership has grown to 85 players. There is full symphonic instrumentation including English horns, bass clarinet, and a full French horn sections, which are lacking in many high school orchestras. The repertoire has included many of the standard symphonies, overtures, and suites. It is believed that through the direct contact of playing the great music of the masters, the highest type of appreciation is developed.

Junior Band and Orchestra

Besides the large groups already mentioned there are two small but very important music organizations here at Morton. These are the Junior Band and Orchestra. It is here that the younger and inexperienced musicians get the training that is to be of so much value to them in later years. These organizations are under the same direction as the more advanced groups but study music that is less difficult, their main object being to get preliminary training needed for membership in the Senior Band and Orchestra.

The students in these organizations today will form the nucleus of our Band and Orchestra of tomorrow.

THE VOCAL DEPARTMENT

Director, C. K. Nicholas

The Vocal Department of the J. Sterling Morton High School is headed by Charles K. Nicholas. The department is composed of several sections, namely; the Chorus, the Choir, the Boys' Glee Club, and a special training class. The Chorus consists of both beginners and advanced students. The Boys' Glee Club is also a training class and is open to any boy in high school. To be a member of the Choir one must have had at least one year of chorus work. The department does not try to promote solo singing; but Mr. Nicholas conducts a special training class for those who have had one year of Chorus and one year of Choir.

The class routine is not all singing, for the students are taught the fundamentals of sight reading such as key signatures, both the bass and treble clefs, proper rhythms as indicated by time signatures and metronome marks, and also foreign words and phrases which aid in the interpretation of the music. The student is also taught the proper care of the vocal apparatus, breathing, tone production, and diction. All this knowledge is combined to provide beautiful effects with the voice.

The Choir is the showpiece of this department; its members give a Christmas program, appear at two big music department concerts, and often receive invitations to sing outside of school from organizations interested in educational work. Various types of music are studied, both sacred and secular, modern and ancient numbers being among those sung. The Choir has always been well received wherever it has appeared, at school, outside, or on the radio.

This department aims to develop a music consciousness in its students not only in singing but in every form of music art.

MUSIC
HISTORY
HARMONY

R. S. Lundgren, Instructor

The Theory section of the music department comprises three courses, namely, musical theory, harmony, and history of music.

Musical theory is a beginner's course in which the fundamentals of music writing are taught. Here the various parts which make up a composition such as scales, intervals, and simple chords are studied. Each member of the class is encouraged to write some original work for his particular instrument. At the end of the year each student has opportunity to make a public appearance, playing his own original composition.

Harmony, an advanced course in theory, is open to those who have had theory or anyone who has had piano keyboard experience. Here harmonization of given bases and melodies is the main subject of study. The original compositions written by the students in the harmony class are of a more advanced nature than those written by the theory students.

Both of these courses are very beneficial to the musician as they help him to understand and interpret his music. This is true more particularly of those who make public appearances every spring in district, state, and national contests.

History of music is a study of the development of music and musical instruments from early times up to the present day. In connection with this subject a course in music appreciation is taught. This course follows that of the NBC Music Appreciation Hour conducted by Walter Damrosch. By means of a radio the students are able to hear compositions such as they themselves play and study about played and interpreted by the NBC Symphony Orchestra. Students also have a guide book to those programs which gives further explanation concerning the music which is played.

COMMERCE

BUSINESS EDUCATION

Way back in a dim, unknown age, in an unknown land, and in an unknown manner a man was created. Within him, in the same unknown age and the same unknown manner a tiny seed was planted. At first it was a dry, lifeless little seed resting in the poor soil of the man's heart with nothing to nourish it and make it grow.

The man had no desire for things which were beyond his capacity to grasp either with his hands or his wit. As ages passed by, however, the man's needs grew until he found it difficult to exist without cooperating with his fellow men. It was at this time that the tiny seed of commerce began to show first signs of life; nourished by curiosity and watered by desire of the man's soul, it burst open its hard shell, and sent forth its first tender shoots into the world.

When the man's needs increased to such an extent as to force him to depend on the other fellow for a number of his necessities, the tiny plant of commerce received another good watering.

The more things the man found available, the more he demanded, and the little shrub grew remarkably fast into a tree. Each time the man wanted something he could not get around him, he went out after it, and this activity added another branch to the rapidly growing tree.

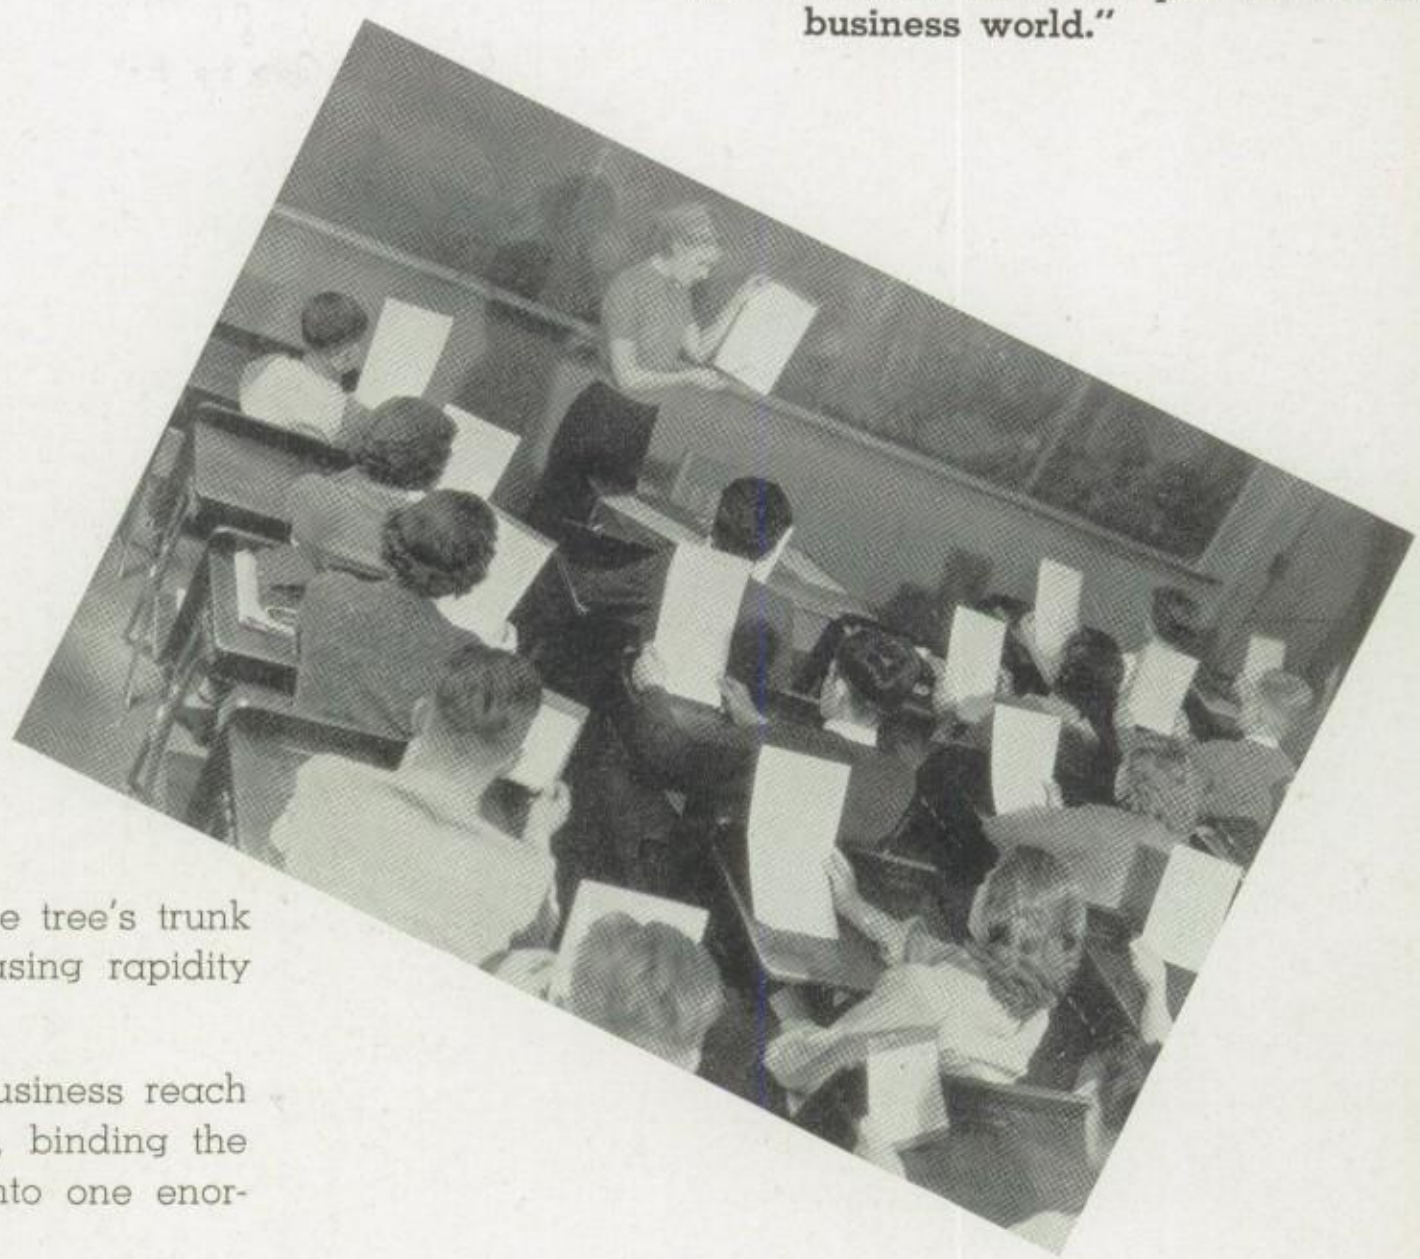
BUSINESS SCIENCE

COMMERCIAL GEOGRAPHY



"—Business science classes are introduced to the various methods and practices of the business world."

The tree grew twice its size when the man in quest of trade conquered his inborn fear of the mysterious, unknown seas and discovered new worlds. After this all-important event many new branches were added to the tree's trunk which grew with an ever-increasing rapidity into the full size it is today.

The roots of commerce and business reach into the remotest parts of earth, binding the continents, races, and nations into one enormous whole.

Business is one of the seven cardinal objectives of education: it cannot be separated from living in the social order.

"—Commercial Geography takes students on an imaginary trip around the world."

Millions of people are needed to keep this great tree of commerce and business in good growing condition. Business executives, secretaries, stenographers, bookkeepers, typists, filing clerks, accountants, and many, many others are included in this endless chain.

To have efficient workers we must have means in our school for training and preparing individuals for their places in this immense staff. To do this, we have business courses that provide the necessary training in the various activities.

Boys and girls who, enrolling at Morton High School, decide to enter the business world, find many courses designed to aid them in their quest. In the business science classes students, ignorant of matters of commerce, are introduced to the various methods and practices in all kinds of businesses; such as a glimpse at the value of taking out insurance, the manner of using bank drafts and business documents, the requirements necessary to become a good secretary or bookkeeper. In other words, they get a bird's eye view of business relations, in modern commerce.

A course in commercial geography takes the students on an imaginary trip around the world. After visiting many countries and learning interesting things about their inhabitants, they study the products of each from the viewpoint of business. They learn that they cannot figure on prices in different business houses without knowing something about the production of different articles.

Since shorthand is of vital importance to efficient business communication, our school provides opportunities to the eager students desiring to master this field. It is an invaluable subject to both boys and girls in the business world. For girls it holds well-paid stenographic and secretarial positions. For boys it provides the stepping-stone of their business career. It enables them to gain perfect access to manners and methods of all business activities.

"—Shorthand is an invaluable subject to both boys and girls."

"—For girls it holds well paid stenographic positions."

This branch of the Business Education Department is constantly growing. When Miss Bell, the head of the Business Education Department, came to

"—Drill Work."

Morton, she had in her shorthand class only three advanced students. That was a shorthand class! The whole school was proud of it! It was in the same room with the typing class, which, at that time, consisted of eleven students. The classes were separated by a glass partition. Once the President of the Board came in, proudly eyed the class, rubbed his hands together, and exclaimed, "My, how this department is growing!!"

Now there are 1,160 students in the shorthand classes according to the last enrollment. This increase serves as a good measuring stick for comparing the growth of the tree of commerce with the growth of population and the growing demands of man.

Out of the tiny typewriting class of eleven students grew one of the strongest branches of the commercial department today, with an enrollment of 2,240 students. The typewriter is used today in the same way that a pencil was used a few years ago. We find this machine a necessity not only in the business office, but also in the home; and the course in this subject is planned accordingly.

In the first year of typewriting, the business students learn to control the keyboard, to do drill work, and to write letters. In the second year they write legal and business documents, rough drafts, business correspondence, reports, and type from corrected manuscript. In the last two years they review all the approved business forms, and in addition to the regular work learn to operate various office machines.

Up-to-date business men equip their offices with modern machines which do everything

"An Enrollment of 2,240 Students."

from opening incoming correspondence to addressing, stamping, and sealing the outgoing mail.

The office practice and secretarial courses are designed to give students a workable knowledge of some of the practices and procedures in an actual business office. In these courses besides the regular class work, the students are given many opportunities to gain experience by acting as secretaries to department heads and teachers who need help. Here, too, much work is done for departments throughout the school, and this gives practical and valuable experience to the students.

Before finishing a course in typewriting, the students learn to operate the mimeograph and the ditto machines. These two machines are commonly used in all offices where a number of identical copies of an article or letter are needed..

In salesmanship classes the interested students learn business from still another angle. Here under the guidance of experienced teachers they are introduced to the principles of salesmanship. By means of interesting projects and demonstrations they learn the secrets of successful buying and selling. A few who become especially interested in this phase of business actually obtain positions as salesmen.

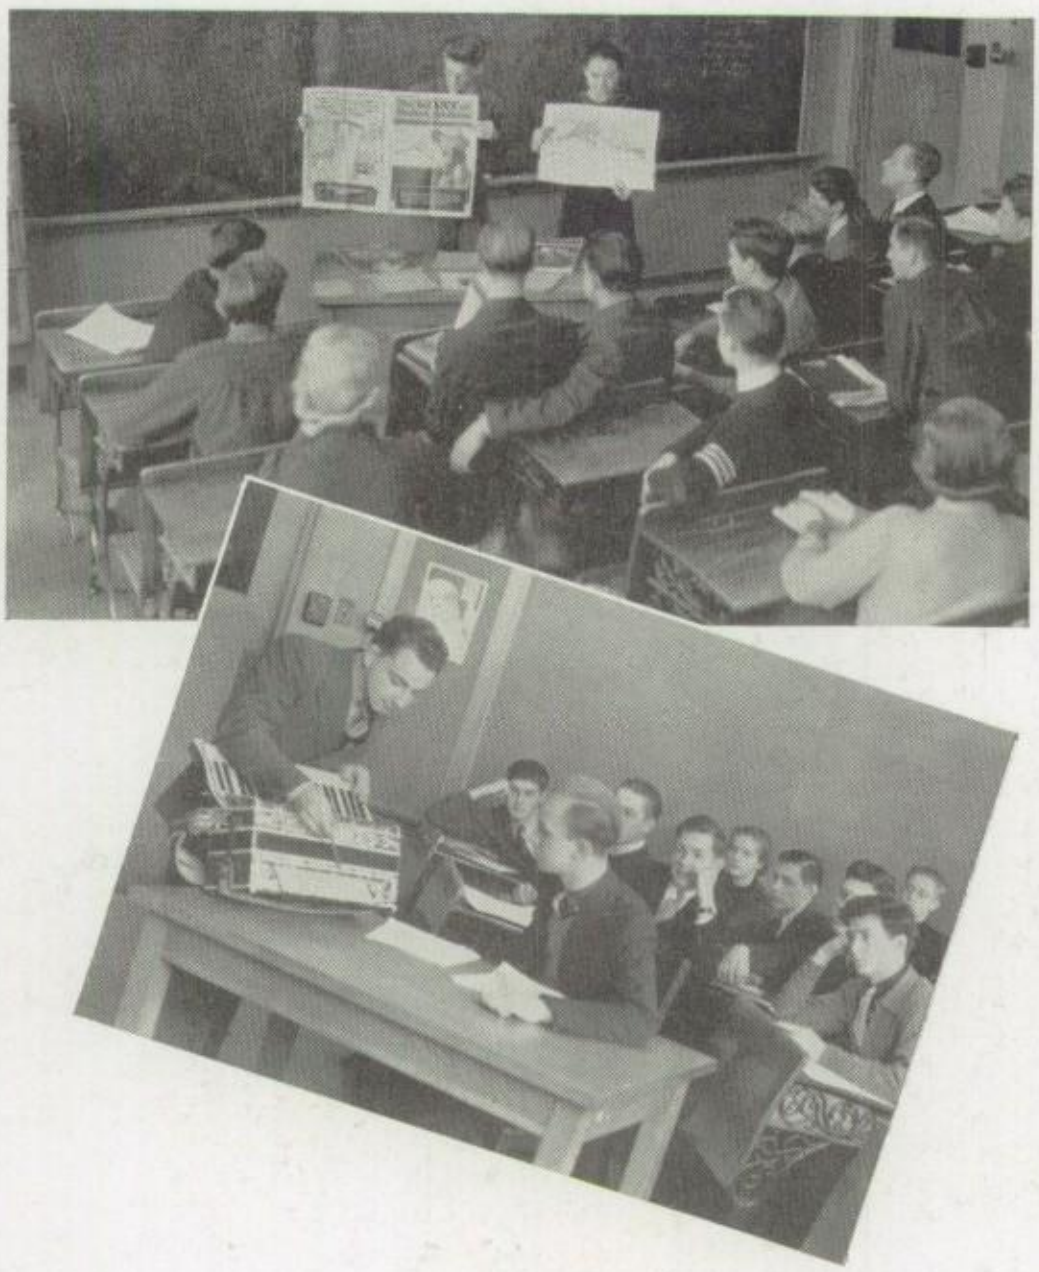
As advertising is increasing in importance and volume year after year, greater numbers of students are entering this field and are choosing it for their life work. In the advertising classes they learn the underlying principles and facts of advertising and promotional work. The students get a fair idea of advertising as displayed in the leading magazines and newspapers, the huge sums of money spent on ads, how advertising influences people in general, and the value of advertising to business.

"Students gain experience acting as secretaries to teachers."

"This Mimeograph is commonly used in modern business."

Another exceedingly interesting as well as valuable course is retail selling. It deals with specific problems found in the retail store. The students learn to fill out sales checks, make change, and operate the cash register. Courtesy of waiting on customers is an important phase which is strongly stressed in the course. Learning the methods of handling different types of people provides an interesting as well as valuable subject for discussion. Many students obtain part-time jobs through the efforts of the retail selling teacher. The money earned, although it can usually be used to an advantage, is not as important as the experience of learning the different types of people and how to get along with them.

ADVERTISING SALESMANSHIP



"—Learning the secrets of successful buying and selling."

Students interested in the management of retail stores find the course in merchandising very helpful. This course deals with various problems of store management, providing for the students the background and plan that is behind the whole set-up of a store; such as merchandising policies, different kinds of organizations in different kinds of stores, handling of the personnel departments, stock control, expense distribution, sales promotions, and store services.

Both merchandising and retail selling have limited membership. Only students that pass a special test are admitted.

The work in bookkeeping supplies the students with an understanding of the principles which underlie the keeping of records. In these classes the students keep journals and ledgers in much the same manner that they are kept in an actual business office. From these records they make up profit and loss statements, balance sheets, and different business reports. The whole course in bookkeeping embodies the technical points of record keeping.

RETAIL SELLING

Comptometry is the newest addition to the department. Each year Morton sends out into the business world boys and girls ready to find employment as first-class comptometer operators. The course in comptometry includes the study of the four fundamental processes of arithmetic whereby problems involving these principles are solved and the students receive actual business experience. The use of such a mechanical office appliance as the comptometer meets the requirements for business calculation far better than any person could.

"These courses deal with various problems of store management—Providing for the students the background and plan that is behind the whole set-up of a store."

COMPTOMETRY
BOOKKEEPING

"—Comptometry includes the study of the four fundamental processes of arithmetic."

All these courses discussed above are planned in such a way as to give the students a thorough knowledge of all the principles, mechanics, and actual practices of the world of commerce.

All of the subjects mentioned here act as nourishment which is digested by our boys and girls and put to such use that our tree of business keeps on increasing in importance, size, and beauty until we can, perhaps, liken it to a giant Sequoia. This Sequoia has the reputation of never dying, and its stature towers above all its neighbors. Thus business has a comparable place in our modern social order.

THE BOYS' COMMERCIAL CLUB

"—trips to offices, factories and business concerns."

The Boys' Commercial Club was organized in 1931 for the purpose of promoting a keener interest in commercial work on the part of the boys of the school. Any boy who is taking or has taken one or more commercial subjects is eligible for membership, as well as any boy whom the members of the club elect toadmit to membership. The membership of the club is limited to thirty boys with Mr. R. J. Deal as advisor.

The club endeavors to acquaint its members with business matters through trips to various offices, factories, and business concerns; to bring them into close contact with business men; to stimulate greater interest among students in education for business; and to encourage a social spirit among commercial students by offering opportunities for social contacts.

"—promoting a keener interest in commercial work."

THE DOTS AND DASHES

The Board

The Dots and Dashes is a commercial organization for girls who are members of the senior courses in shorthand and typewriting. Its purpose is to gain a greater understanding of business procedure and practices, and to promote friendliness among club members.

Some of the activities of the club are: trips through banks, factories, and offices, lectures, plays put on by club members, and discussions on parliamentary law, etiquette, and subjects of like interest. The club also has parties, picnics, and various other socal functions.

The club was founded in 1926 by Miss D. M. Bell with about forty members. It was taken over in 1928 by Miss J. V. Deal. The club has increased to a membership of one hundred and thirty, and the present advisors are Miss J. V. Deal and Miss E. Fitch.

HOOKS AND CIRCLES

The Hooks and Circles is a newly organized commercial club for students taking shorthand II. It was organized in March, 1937, with a membership of eighty-five.

The purpose of the club is to encourage the study of shorthand and business methods among the students. It endeavors to prepare them for positions and to encourage friendliness among members.

The officers of this new organization are Gertrude Bolt, president; Eleanor Yasbec, vice-president; Marlyn Grunwald, secretary, and Martha Jakl, treasurer. These girls with the assistance of Miss Nelson and Miss Goldsmith hope to make this club a permanent part of the Business Education Department.

ADMINISTRATION

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Standing: Joseph F. Mrizek, Adolph Vlk, Rudolph Novy.

Seated: Roderick A. Ginsberg, Secretary; Jerome J. Cerny, President.

In the past year this group of men has demonstrated its loyal devotion to the ideals of a democratic school administration, and has acquired the increased confidence of the community and the student body.

Superintendent of Morton Schools

DOCTOR L. M. HRUDKA

Four years have passed since we, the graduating class, and you, our superintendent, came to Morton. These years under your administration have been rich in educational opportunity and experience and full of happy associations. In leaving, it is with a deep feeling of gratitude for your labor and interest in our behalf that we extend to you our sincere wish for many more pleasant and successful years as superintendent of our dear Morton.

The M. S. G. A. is divided into three main groups: the assembly which consists of a representative from each English class; the board of directors, elected by the assembly; and the court of justice which is elected by the board.

The board of directors is the executive department and consists of the four class presidents, six seniors, six juniors, four sophomores, and four freshmen. To guide and help this group three faculty advisors are chosen. From this board, chairmen for the various committees are chosen.

The court of justice consists of three members and two faculty advisors who are also elected by the board. Sessions are held weekly to pass on various charges submitted and punishment is given according to the seriousness of the charge.

Aside from its legislation the M. S. G. A., through its various committees, is brought in contact with every organization in this school.

The most beneficial thing done in the M. S. G. A. this year was the organizing of the school for the hall monitors whereby they will become educated to the rules of the organization and perform their tasks to the best of their ability.

This organization has been created mainly for the purpose of forming the basis of an alumni organization by which the graduating seniors can keep in continuous contact with the activities of the school, and their classmates. The other purposes are to render service in any way possible to the school and to the community, to create a new school spirit, and to promote friendship in general among the juniors and seniors.

CLASS HISTORY

When we first came to high school, we were 1200 of the most timid but eager freshmen ever to come to Morton. Our modesty prevents us from adding that we were also 1200 of the best. In the fall of 1933, we elected our first officers. They were: Evelyn Mak, president; Edward Janzella, vice-president; Dorothy Lewis, secretary; and Helen Kowall, treasurer. Considering what "green freshies" we were, it is not surprising that we were often utterly confused by the pranks played upon us by upperclassmen.

As "sophisticated" sophomores, we returned to dear old Morton. Forgetting that once we had been freshmen, we constantly reminded the "freshies" of their lowly position. Bob Anderson guided the class as president; Warren Hughsted as vice-president; Betty Mohler as secretary; and Joe Sisco as treasurer. Our most important social activity that year was a St. Patrick's party on March 15th, 1935.

The following year we were a group of intellectual juniors, more eager to work than ever. As uperclassmen, we could go to parties with the seniors and could join many clubs and activities which we, as underclassmen, had not been privileged to enjoy. Spare moments throughout the year were spent planning and preparing for our most important social event up to this time —the junior-senior Spring Prom, given in honor of the seniors. During this year John Drish was president; Irwin Waldvogel, vice-president; George Dolezal, secretary; and Helen Keppner, treasurer.

At least we had become seniors and were about to see our cherished hopes fulfilled. Although as seniors we were more superior in the eyes of others, most of us were still as eager with anticipation as we were four years ago; and all of us were conscious of the fact that we had but a few short months to accomplish the things which we, as freshmen, had resolved to do.

Four years ago we felt that when we should receive our diplomas, we should have reached the top. Now we realize that we have only reached the place where each shall choose a separate path. Commencement will indeed be a commencement of life for us. What will come in future years remains to be seen.

Dear F. Math
Dear F. RD
next year & hope we again meet in some classes. You have always been a model lady in my mind and I think you are a sweet and just person to follow.
Marcelle.

ANOTHER CALAMITOUS SEASON

Defeat after defeat played havoc with Coach Pavlinek's heavyweight griders as the local mentor with the aid of Coach George Fencl tried in vain for the first victory in three years after injecting new spirit in the squad.

However, through that dark cloud a silver lining was apparent as the problem of reconstruction became more tremendous. After dropping hard fought contests to New Trier, Proviso, Waukegan, Highland Park, and Evanston, the locals climaxed the usual poor season with brilliant exhibition against Oak Park, champions of the Suburban League.

Although the Maroons were not victorious they won the honor of being the only team to score on the Orange and Blue shirted villagers when halfback Kuda tossed a 40 yard pass to end, Al Pupelis, who ran 30 yards for the touchdown. This was Morton's only victory, a moral one.

Starring for the locals during the campaign were Gordon MacCarell in the backfield and Bob Anderson on the line. Others who played consistent ball were Bill Fugate, Irv. Waldvogel, Al Pupelis, George Basich, George Dolezal, and Joe Bezdek.

Morton's efforts last year for victory were not in vain as a much stronger squad is expected this coming fall. Returning lettermen are Pupelis, Kuda, Bachelli, Roubik, Meyer, Fugate, and Reiter.

Bottom Row: E. Buschalko, M. Tlapa, J. Drish (Capt.), N. Strumillo, R. Albaugh, N. Ziebell (Coach).

TIED FOR SECOND PLACE

Paced by the high scoring of John Drish, wiry, sharp-shooting basket flipper, and the constant tallying and pass work of Norman Strumillo, Coach Norman Ziebell's heavyweight cagers ended the 36-37 season as undisputed winners of second place with a record of eight victories, three setbacks, and one tie. Proviso's heavies won twelve straight contests to capture the league crown while the Oak Park Villagers landed in third place with eight wins and four losses.

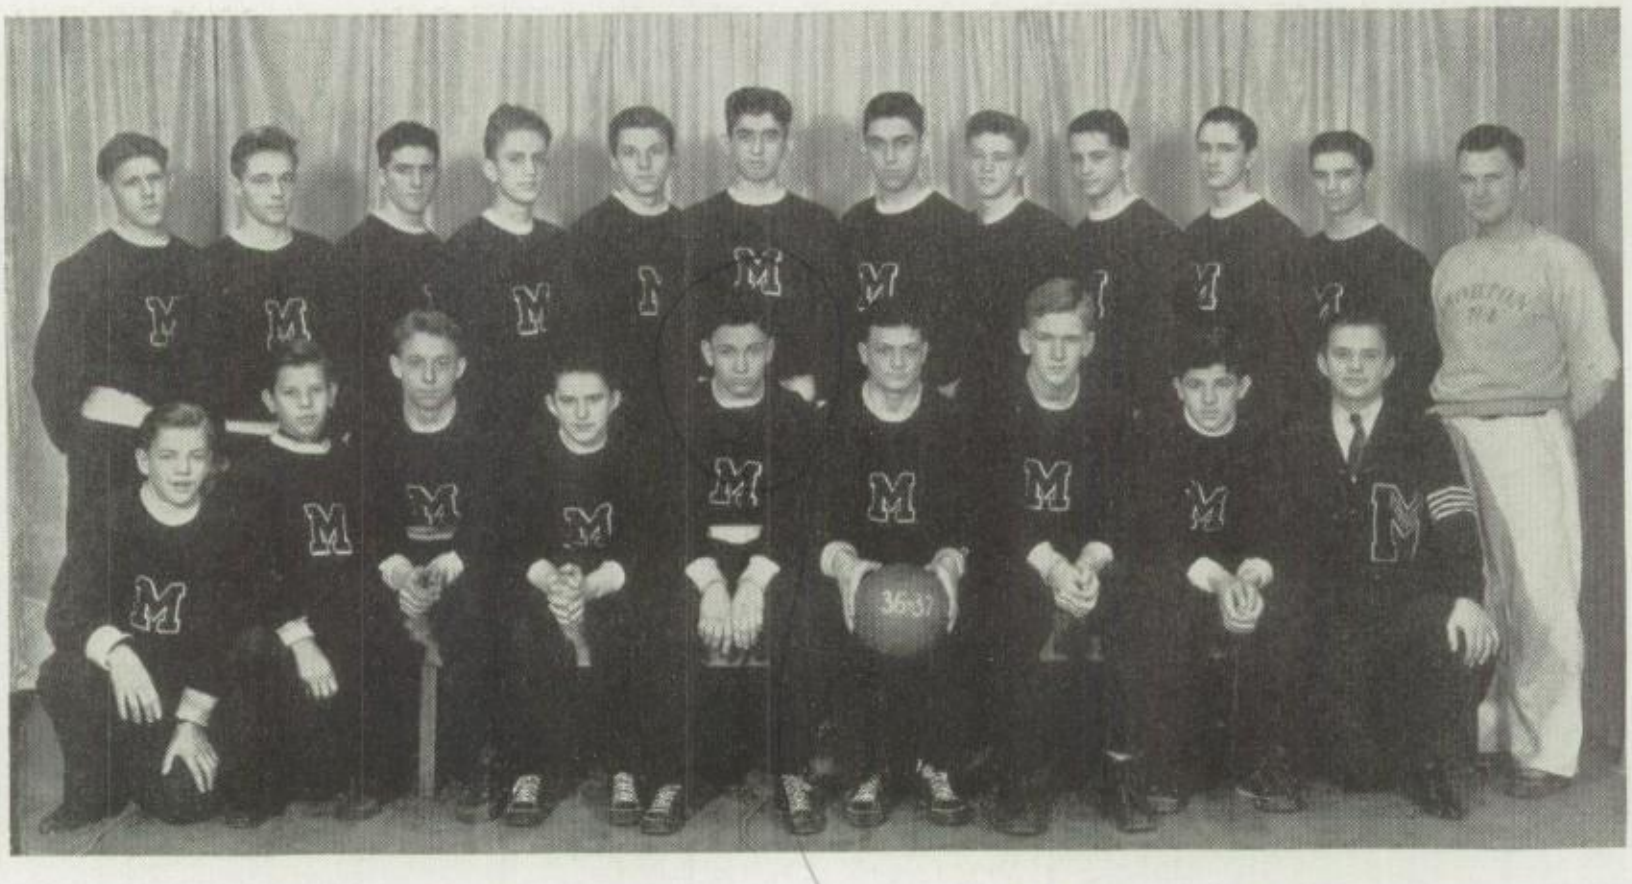
Dropping tilts to Proviso and Evanston in the first round while emerging victorious over Oak Park, Waukegan, Highland Park, and New Trier, the locals fell back to third place. Proviso and Evanston were again the jinx teams in the second round; the Maroons bowing to the Maywood five and tieing the Wildcat quintet. Over again the same four outfits fell before the Morton onslaught.

Team's scoring honors went to John Drish, who won the Suburban League scoring championship with 133 points. Norman Strumillo, forward, was runner-up with 68 points. For the second straight year these two boys played consistent ball to lead the Mortonites to the runner-up position.

Ending their high school careers, were John Drish, Norman Strumillo, Milton Tlapa, John Martin, John Pianowski, Edward Veverka, and Bill Kopecky. Next year's prospects will shape up in Albaugh, Jugovic, Parker, Pupelis, Polivka, Vilkelis, and Kral.

In the regional tournament after beating Argo High School 35-9, the Maroon heavies for the third time dropped a contest to Proviso's undefeated quintet, 26-24. Steve Mizen led the attack for the victors.

FROSH-SOPH BASKETBALL



Top Row: L. Poeremba, W. Anderson, J. Simcich, G. Sliwa, D. Kelpszas, J. Krammer, J. Mann, A. Higgins, R. Boeheme, U. Podlesek, G. Marsh, G. Fencl (Coach).

Bottom Row: G. Kaha (Mgr.), Sherrie (Mgr.), G. Waniata, J. Hapac, A. Guerrero, K. Polivka, E. Parker, A. Michie, L. Kastl (Mgr.).

A THIRD PLACE DEADLOCK

Although landing in a third place deadlock with the Highland Park quintet, Morton frosh-soph basketball aggregation suffered one of its poorest seasons in many years by compiling a Suburban League record of seven wins and five losses.

Coach Fencl's five were unable to lick the Highland Parkers or the Oak Park Villagers the entire season; facing both outfits twice without snatching a triumph. New Trier of Kenilworth led by the high-scoring of Marchini, who tallied nineteen points, registered the only other conference victory over the local underclassmen.

Carrying the brunt of the assignments and leading the Mortonites' scoring attack were Captain Kenneth Polivka, guard, and big Edward Parker, center. Parker was very valuable with his ability to get the tap, rebound, and score from the free throw circle on pivot shots. Polivka was an all-around man, starring with consistent scoring, well-placed passes, and good floor judgment. Others who saw plenty of action and did outstanding work were Joe Hapac, Allen Higgins, Bill Albaugh, Armond Guerrero, George Wamata, Robert Boehme, and Jerome Mann.

BASEBALL

Top Row: Kasl (Mgr.), Gorcowski, Kanak, Desmond, Torkelson, Kolb, Oras, Bezdek, Kral, Rockawiak, Danek (Mgr.), Fencl (Coach).

SUBURBAN LEAGUE CHAMPS

Champions of the Suburban League, and fourteen straight practices and league victories; this was the record of Coach George Fencl's baseballers in 1936.

Slashing down such formidable foes as Oak Park, Proviso, Waukegan, New Trier, Highland Park, and Evanston with the consistent hurling of Bill Smith and John Pianowski, the Maroons continued sensationally to win the Conference Crown for the second straight year, having tied with Proviso in the previous campaign.

Pacing the attack for the locals was John Drish, slugging shortstop, who led the team in batting with over a .500 average. Harry Hildebrandt, Emil Devan, Richard Kucera, and Billy Calogeratos were other stalwart and potent instruments in many of the Morton triumphs.

Purely a spirited squad who were willing to take chances, the Mortonites won four encounters on squeeze plays. One of the features of the year was the Oak Park-Morton encounter which the locals won 8-7 by executing perfectly three "suicide" squeeze plays in the last inning.

Top Row: F. Posejpal, F. Cech, F. Smrz (Mgr.), A. Holub, E. Vojak, R. Svoboda, D. Scherrer, J. Trvsicky, R. Bichicci, G. Cipra, O. Vanek, F. Kletchka (Mgr.).

COOK COUNTY CHAMPS

For the second straight year Coach Jahelka's soccermen won the Cook County title, bowling over such formidable opponents as Batavia, Tilden, University High, Oak Park, and Schurz.

Opening the season with a very convincing triumph over Batavia, 5-2; the locals continued to romp over all opposition. Tilden came next, the Mortonites tieing the Chicagoans 2-2. Another deadlock, 0-0, resulted in Morton's meet with University High. In the last two weeks of play the Jahelkamen beat Tilden 4-0, licked University High, 6-1, crushed Oak Park, 3-0, tied the Villagers 1-1, and smothered Schurz, 5-0.

Members of the squad who played a consistent brand of championship ball were Seymour Hirschberg, Henry Posejpal, colorful captain, Frank Posejpal, "Bunny" Vanek, and "Rudy" Svoboda. The Posejpal lads contributed excellent defensive as well as offensive playing. Vanek and Svoboda, the two scoring twins of the Maroon booters, led the team's offensive attack and aided immensely with their very effective short pass manner. Hirschberg was an outstanding goalie. Others often in the starting lineup were Gasa, Srensky, Holub, and Ciora.

Players returning next year are Hirschberg, Tvrzicky, Friedl, and Vojack, who are sure to continue the team's success. A very strong schedule awaits the Jahelka-coached soccermen as they will make another attempt to win the third straight county title.

BOXING

STATE CHAMPS

Undefeated in four years, the Maroon and White pugilists continue to be the terrors of the state and have set one of the longest strings of triumphs in the history of Morton.

Skirmishes with other high school outfits have been rather limited as the Maroon mentor has been unable to book meets with such opponents as St. Bedes, Culver Military Academy, and others who have high-touted squads. However, during the years the local pugs were able to extend their winning streak to eighteen straight with victories over Morton Junior College, and Grant twice.

Knowing the excellent talent will not always be on hand, Coach Jahelka staged a huge intramural boxing tournament which aided him in picking the best fighter at Morton. Early in Morton the survivors of the preliminary rounds paired off to bring to a climax the hot competition which was previously held. Champions crowned in eleven divisions were William Kourim, paperweight; James Kleronomos, Junior Flyweight; Michael Scilingo, Flyweight; John Wasczak, Junior Bantamweight; Louis Smith, Bantamweight; Armando Vuolo, Featherweight; Ray Donat, Junior Lightweight; William Mrizek, Lightweight; Leonard Szudy, Junior Welterweight; Andrew Terlicki, Middleweight; George Marinek, Middleweight.

With the very good material which became apparent as the result of the huge fighting panorama, Morton will have a very good chance to keep intact its greatest winning streak and become one of the best teams in the United States. Coach Jahelka has yet many good scrappers who will return to next year's team, and with boxing increasing in popularity every day plenty of newcomers will fill the holes left open by seniors who graduate this June.

Morton girls, like the boys, take a great interest in soccer. The opening of the soccer season is greatly anticipated, and the turnouts are always large. The season extends from the end of September to November, cold weather being the least of the girls' worries. Games are played only between classes and are open to all their respective members with the requirement of having ten practices.

The participation in soccer and all sports is purely optional; therefore these girls are really interested in sports and make the best use possible of all opportunities to learn to play and enjoy the game.

Best of luck
to you.

BASKETBALL

Basketball is one of the highlights in a girl's sports career; the requirements for team membership are the same as in soccer, namely, ten practices. After the technique of the game is mastered, teams are chosen and inter-class tournaments are started. Referees, scorekeepers, and time-keepers are appointed who have full control of affairs. The season ends with a victory banquet for the champions.

"One of the best and most accurate high school papers in the aim of the '36-'37 staff of the Mortonian Weekly."

In order to attain a higher degree of accuracy, which is the first and foremost essential of journalistic writing, several additions were made to the editorial staff during the second semester of the current school year. These additions were the proof reading and copy reading staffs and the positions of associate editor and copy editor.

Not only has the '36-'37 staff attempted to publish a "newsier" and more journalistically correct high school paper, but it has also tried to give Morton students an ultra-modern publication.

WASHINGTON TRIP

In December of this year the Social Studies Society sponsored a tour to Washington, D. C. The group of students left on Sunday, December 27, and the following morning they had arrived at the nation's capital. An excellent panoramic view of this most beautiful of all American cities was gotten from the Washington Monument. Undoubtedly this trip will remain in the memories of the students who went as a high spot of the high school years.

A Senile, Nonagenarian Grandfather

Paul Mick, '38

The deep, green woods echoed and reechoed from an ancient, foreign ditty sung by the bass voice of a huge ax-man as he dealt lusty blows upon a tree. It is a week before his marriage and he is already building a home in which he hopes to settle down with his wife and, then, maybe, later on, some little beings. Sweat streaming down his rugged face, rhythmically swinging the flashing ax without the slightest deviation from its mark, shoulders straining, muscles tugging, he fell the tree. Colossal chest heaving slowly, gently like some restless ocean, he paused a moment before sending the keen, biting wedge flying into the yielding wood.

Hours later, prior to the homeward journey, the sun's last, golden rays streaming on his flushed face, he knelt upon a tiny knoll awkwardly, blessed himself awkwardly, joined calloused hands awkwardly, and let his heart pour out its gratitude that he was permitted another day of honest toil.

A week later he lead his blushing bride into the completed home. How her eyes must have glistened as she saw the little spinning wheel, the crude furniture, the open-hearth fireplace, the tiny windows with real glass in them, and everything made by this strange young man of the open air to whom she had just pledged herself, and, yet, who twirls the ends of his mustache so proudly and so comically. Some say he is the descendent of a powerful baron. Certainly his father has a huge sword kept hidden in his home which is reputed to have been swung upon many an enemy's head by this great personage in the cause of his country. How fine to have a husband of such noble descent! He will always protect her from harm and evil, and she will always try to serve him faithfully. If only he would be pleased with her and her work, if only——.

So he began their matrimonial life, and so it was throughout the rest of their lives. An ax in one hand, the plow in another, the Bible under his belt, he faced the setting sun, forging a level path so that his descendents may have a life that was denied him.

A Modern Revere

Listen, my children, you recollec'
The midnight dash of Elmer Cech?
He dashed from the store to the on-coming train;
But just as he got there, he thought with great pain:
"My hat, oh, my hat, it's back on the rack;
I'll be left behind, for the train won't come back."
But quick as a flash, 'ere an eyelid could bat,
He was off to the drugstore to bring back his hat
"Oh wait, sir, please wait, sir," yowled Hope like a cat,
"For Elmer's gone back to the store for his hat."
The conductor was stern — he said never a peep.
Poor Hope was so sad that she thought she would weep.
But what is this figure that comes down the track?
Great gods of Olympus, Elmer is back!
" 'Tis Elmer," cries Hopie, "he flies like a bat;
He's back safe and sound, and he's wearing his hat."

The Monotony of Student Life

Ellen Baxter, '37

The statement is often heard that a student's life is monotonous. It consists merely of rising in the morning, going to school, preparing assignments, returning home, and going to bed. This same routine is repeated day after day.

On the way to school, one may see the sun rising dramatically over the horizon. Before the first bell rings, bits of news are exchanged with friends. In American history a "why" is learned which explains the movie at the local theatre last night. Far-off places are visited, and interesting anecdotes are learned in the routine of commercial classes. New authors and new characters are introduced in modern literature classes. Pleasure is experienced in seeing your hands create a beautiful article in your domestic science class. The mind relapses while you enjoy keen competition in a bowling match or learn a new dance routine as a part of physical education. An unusual program at the assembly sets your spirits soaring. Lunch gossip indicates that Mary has a bid to the prom, Susy has made the Senior Honor Society, or Jimmy is going with a different girl. During the next hour or two it's hurry here and there hunting material for a term paper, looking for suggestions for the committee on the next tea, gathering bits of drama for the annual, or stopping to chat with a teacher. The next two hours are spent preparing the next day's assignments. To earn an A on that essay or a "well stated" on that recitation doubly repays your efforts in preparing the assignment. The time passes quickly when discussing troubles and Easter's new outfit with Marge or Helen during a brisk walk on the way home. An hour is spent at the family dinner table hearing the latest office gossip. In the evening in your favorite easy chair with a package of gum to help you "concentrate," two hundred pages of that best seller Gone with the Wind are read; provided there aren't too many interruptions by the entrance of family guests, brother wanting help with his arithmetic, or father looking for the evening paper.

Yes, a student's life is monotonous.

Cold light upon colder roofs——
Icey moonlight on the oak floor . . .
Flowing through my window
Geometrically proportioned
Yet elfin enough
To inspire beautiful
Word dreams——
God, let them come
Through my mouth . . .

Helen Placzek, '37

Excerpt From My Life

by Angelo Marasco, '40

MY LIFE

I was born in Italy in the month of December, on Christmas Eve, in the year 1921.

The streets of the town were full of people and brightly illuminated from the many windows. Everyone was paying homage to the birth of our Lord. The neighboring people had brought together all the wood available and piled it up in front of the church. Then it was lit, and in a few minutes, huge flames went billowing upward into the cold starry night. The leaping flames threw weird shadows everywhere, and many fantastic forms took shape.

The church was located on a small sloping hill, and it had a very high steeple with a massive bell. His bell, it seems, has some history attached to it. It happened that a monstary was abandoned because of its age and tendency to cave in. The monks left some things behind them, one of these things a bell. The few adventurous people of our town secured the bell and many pieces of marble which helped to build up our beautiful church. The bell has a deep massive tone, which can be heard for miles in all directions.

The bells are ringing! Christ is born. With the shouting and laughing of the people blended a child's cry. "I was born."

My parents were both Italians and from the same town. A year or so after my birth my father sailed away to America to seek prosperity. My mother's family name was Dattoli and my father's Marasco. My mother's father was a sort of a chauffeur for a wealthy person in our town. His job was to drive his master where he wished to go. He had to clean the carriages, groom the horses, clean the stables, and help around the estate. He died in 1931, and this was quite a shock when the news reached us.

On my father's side things were quite different. My grandfather owned 100 acres of land in which he planted all sorts of fruits and vegetables. He also owned a flour mill run by water power in which he ground most of the town's flour. Since no water could be secured near our parts, he bought the water in huge quantities which he stored in a reservoir three feet deep encircled by a solid stone wall. The mill was located under the overhanging hill so that the water from the reservoir fell like a small waterfall turning the wheel below. The excess water flowed out through a small tunnel under the mill which formed a small stream. This water was used for irrigation.

My father's mother died when he was ten years old, so naturally I don't know anything about her. From my father's description however, nobody equaled her. My mother's mother liked nothing better than to please me; so we grew attached to each other immensely. I was sorry when we had to part when I sailed for America.

I was a husky little youngster; and when I reached the ripe old age of one and one half years, I made my way around the town safely. Typhoid fever was my first sickness. It came when I was almost two years old. Two months later I was as good as new.

The house in which I was born was sturdily built of huge planks. It was comfortably furnished inside. The beams overhead were left uncovered so that we could hang up sausages and bread for our winter's use. The outside of the building was stone covered with mortar to withstand the mild winters. There were two short flights of stairs. The one facing the road was entirely made of stone; the one in the rear was a wooden one. We kept pigs, dogs to protect them, and fowls in our back-yard. I spent many happy hours watching the small, fluffy, little yellow chicks.

In my father's family there were three girls and five boys. One of the girls died, and two are living there yet. Three of the boys came to Chicago while the youngest remained. John was the youngest, and he recently went home from the Ethiopian conquest. My father and his oldest brother fought in the World War, and many are the chances they took.

With the spring came the task of farming. The planting was done in this way. After the horse drawn plow had made the furrows, my grandfather punched a hole with a pointed stick as he went along while John with a bag of seeds dropped them into each hole. Through the summer the crops were taken care of, and in the fall the neighboring people helped in the harvest. My mother and aunts cooked all morning for the hungry men at noon. Fixing the baskets upon their heads they brought them to the farm. The men ate right in the field under the warm sun smelling the sweet scented hay.

When I was four years old, my one great ambition was to be a soldier; and I often went parading down the streets with four of my trusty followers all dressed with a knapsack, ammunition, gun, and wooden horse. We were very imaginative.

Our town was small containing about 2000 inhabitants. In the middle of it was a huge square with a statute of our king upon a horse. Peddlers sold their goods and fruits there everyday. When I was visiting my grandmother, whose house faces the square, she told me to go and buy some figs, which she knew I liked. I was busy buying them and didn't notice the infantry which was passing by. They came, rank upon rank, close together, and I had to wait one hour before gaining the other side of the road. The next morning, looking towards the hill facing the town, hundreds of white tents dotted the landscape. These soldiers came to town often, and I was their favorite. They returned my salutes as they did to their superior officers.

Mr. Brown Goes to the Movies

Delores Manthey, '39

Mr. Brown dramatically clutched the arm of his seat, jerked his head around, and fiercely glared at the culprits. Rest assured, the paper rattling stopped immediately.

"Now," thought Mr. Brown, "I'll have some peace."

Alas, just as he settled back to enjoy the movie, the young lady sitting next to him espied a friend going down the aisle.

"Sadie, Sadie!" she hissed hoarsely.

Unfortunately Sadie heard. Then a whispered conversation was carried on right in front of Mr. Brown's face. He was desperately trying to find an opening and see his favorite actor about to be stabbed in the back when his busy neighbor decided to sit with her friend. She crawled past everyone like a gust of wind rushing on, ignoring the damage it had done. Inwardly seething Mr. Brown smoothed his hair, jerked his scarf into place, and spent two precious minutes hunting for his glove, which had been thrown to the floor.

Once more he established himself, but peace was not for him. The paper rattlers had decided to chew candy. Mr. Brown wondered if another beautiful stare was necessary. However, after some thought he decided that he had better save his energy for future use. Their candy couldn't last forever! But the candy chewing became so noticeable that when Mr. Brown saw an empty seat a little way to the left, he did not hesitate to gather his belongings and go to the vacant place.

Now he could really turn his attention to the picture, only he wished that the couple ahead of him would finish their conversation and sit straight so that he could see. He wished in vain; for after twisting first his head and finally his body from the left to the right and back again, all he had accomplished was to knock askew the hat of the woman sitting next to him. Realizing that the position of the pair ahead was likely to be permanent, he relaxed and withdrew his neck.

Suddenly he heard from behind, "Didn't I say that would happen? Now she'll jump down and——."

"We-ll," sighed Mr. Brown to himself, "we have one of those kind in our midst, do we? She was all I needed to make the evening complete."

He listened to the monologue for just a little. Then quickly rising, he clutched his belongings to him, and stalked out of the movie house muttering to himself about young upstarts who wouldn't ever get to first base on their manners!

Your Class?

Lillian Zajicek, '37

CHARACTERS: Miss Harris—Teacher
James .....an intelligent student
Ruth .....an alert student
Jane .....the girl who is always late
Marie...the girl who speaks out of turn
George, the boy with the wrong answer
Agnes ..... a quiet girl
Many other students in the class of about forty.

PLACE: In any classroom
SETTING: An hour about the middle of the day. The room has the usual classroom appearance.

As the curtain rises, the bell rings.

MISS HARRIS: May we have the room quiet, please. I have an announcement I am asked to read to you. (reads) "There will be an assembly tomorrow at two o'clock for all morning scheduled students. All are to attend if at all possible. It is a very important assembly, and after a brief talk from our superintendent—" (boy enters with a slip from dean, hands it to teacher and leaves room). Albert, you are wanted by the dean. (Albert leaves room). Now, let us finish this announcement. (mumbles to herself) Oh! Yes, "by the superintendent after which there will be some entertainment." (She places paper on her desk, and a girl enters with some circulars to be passed out).

GIRL: these are the announcements for our next Parent-Teachers Meeting to be held at seven o'clock next Tuesday night. Please urge your parents to come. (Papers are passed out).

MARY: (speaking out) This paper is blank. May I have a good one, please? (The girl leaves room).

MISS HARRIS: Now for tomorrow's assignment. Open your books to page ninety-nine. (Jane enters late).

MISS HARRIS: (To Jane) Why are you late?

JANE: I, I, er-a-I-I was talking to one of my teachers.

MISS HARRIS: That is no excuse. You are fifteen minutes late. You should be here and in your seat when the bell rings.

JANE: I'm sorry, I'll try to be here on time from now on.

MISS HARRIS: Don't just try. Be here. (To Class) Now that you have your books open—(a knock is heard at the door and the dean of girls accompanied by a parent is there).

DEAN: May I speak to you a moment, please, Miss Harris? (Miss Harris leaves the room).

JANE: (to Mary) She certainly gets cross if one is late a few minutes. She doesn't give a person time to explain.

JAMES: (to George) Good! I hope she stays out the rest of the hour.

GEORGE: (to James) Sure! That would be swell. (Ten minutes have passed. Teacher re-enters).

MISS HARRIS: Quiet, please.—(boy enters with an announcement, gives it to teacher and leaves the room).

MISS HARRIS: (reading) "There will be a special meeting of the representatives from all classes Wednesday, of this week. Please elect a representative today for this meeting." (speaking wearily). Nominations are now open.

JANE: I nominate James. Albert re-enters).

MARIE: I nominate George.

GEORGE: I nominate Ruth. (A pause and Edward is called from room).

JAMES: I move that the nominations be closed.

RUTH: I second it.

MISS HARRIS: Will the nominees please leave the room. (Exit James, Agnes, George, and Ruth). All in favor of James, please stand. (aside to Alice). Write down the number of votes please. (to class) Be seated. Now those in favor of Agnes, please stand. (counts) All Right. Those in favor of George, stand. (counts again) And now those in favor of Ruth, stand. (counts) All right. Alice, read the number of votes for each.

ALICE: Ruth and James have the highest number and are tied.

MISS HARRIS: Well, we'll have to vote for Ruth and James again. All those in favor of Ruth please stand. (counts).

MARIE: (to Albert) I hope Ruth wins. (Ten minutes have passed. A girl enters and Marie is called out).

MISS HARRIS: All right — Ruth has the majority of votes in the class. Betty, will you call them in, please. (All re-enter). Ruth, you have been elected the representative. Will you say a few words?

RUTH: I can't say much, but I know that I will do my best to bring back a good report from each meeting.

MISS HARRIS: Now that we have all this out of the way—(Marie re-enters). (James raises his hand and teacher nods for him to speak).

JAMES: You didn't finish the assignment.

MISS HARRIS: That's right. Well, for tomorrow—(the bell rings. All jump up. Miss Harris looks despairingly as Marie speaks).

MARIE: We didn't have any recitation!.

Romeo

My Pop came home from work one night
An' hollered loud for Mom,
An' sez "I'll tell you sumpin' if you
Promise to be calm.
You think that I'm gettin' old,
But I ain't no anteek!
'Cause all the girls I met tonite
Smiled like I was a sheik.
"So you'd best watch your Romeo,
An' be nice to him, you bet!
Or someday he'll just run away
With a smilin' Juliet."
But Mom she grinned sorta tickled like,
An' sez, "I'll take a chance.
Especially since it's plain to see
Your shirt's outside your pants!"

Isn't It So?

They say that men stop growing
When they're maybe twenty-two.
They say that they stop growing—
But I don't believe it's true.

You can see they keep on growing;
It must be true, I swear!
For, pretty soon you'll see their heads
Grow right up through their hair.
